

Malta

Malta is fast becoming one of the top destinations for globetrotting foreigners, expatriates and professionals. Many expatriates who relocated to Malta vouch for the Mediterranean island, stating that they are enjoying a better standard of living and more luxurious lifestyle, due in part to the island's lower cost of living. Combined with one of the best climates in the world, this validates their decision to relocate to Malta.

Living in Malta

The rationale behind why affluent foreigners are relocating and living in Malta is very simple: year-round sunshine, beneficial tax treatment and career progression.

For those coming to live in Malta, there are several residency programmes that they can take advantage of. These offer reduced tax rates on remitted income subject to certain requirements, several of which are linked to property. Also, Malta is a signatory a wide network of double taxation agreements, which is of particular relevance to those individuals wishing to retire on the island.

For professionals seeking to further their careers, a move to Malta would be of interest as there are a large number of international companies based in Malta constantly on the lookout for talent. These firms offer very attractive financial packages to qualified professionals, particularly in the financial services, gaming and aviation sectors.

Apart from the fiscal benefits of relocating to the island, expatriates will find many other advantages to living in Malta. The island's size guarantees that one is never far from new experiences. These range from exotic water-sports to exploring Malta's range of architecture and history that is scattered throughout the island. In addition, Malta's climate has received wide praise for being the best in the world in a recent survey by International Life magazine and is ranked as one of the top three locations for quality of life.
